BRITAIN TO USE
NEUTRAL FLAG;
TWO SHIPS SUNK

All Traffic Is Canceled From England to French Ports.

WILHELMINA TO PRIZE COURT

British Government Announces American Vessel Brought to Germany With Food Cargo Must Await Decision of Tribunal.

Washington, Feb. 22.—Great Britain's official declaration in defense of the use by British merchant ships of neutral flags failed to change the international situation arising because of the war zone and flag questions in the opinion of administration officials, except that it possibly opens the way for further exchange of diplomatic notes between the United States and England and the United States and Germany.

At the same time it was admitted that the blowing up by a mine of an American ship with the possible loss of American lives might bring the issue to a crisis, and the feeling of apprehension still prevails in official circles. The general opinion that no effort would be made by the Washington government to halt American commerce with Europe was unaltered, and this, taken in connection with Germany's disclaimer of responsibility for anything that might happen to neutral ships either from submarines or mines, served to keep up the anxiety.

To Hold the Wilhelmina.

London, Feb. 22.—The cargo of the American steamer Wilhelmina will be held by the British government pending a decision of the prize court.

And British merchant vessels will continue to use the American flag, or any other flag, whenever they think it necessary to do so to escape destruction by the Germans.

If results in destruction of an American vessel by a German submarine, the United States government must look to Germany—not to England—for redress.

This announcement was made by Sir Edward Grey, foreign secretary.

In a memorandum relating to the controversy between Great Britain and the United States over foodstuffs it is made clear that Great Britain intends to declare all foodstuffs for Germany contraband.

Germans Violate Law.

After reviewing the German methods of warfare and denouncing them as absolute violations of all international laws, Sir Edward says:

"If, therefore, his majesty's government should hereafter feel constrained to declare foodstuffs absolute contraband or to take other measures for interfering with German trade by way of reprisals, they confidently expect that such action will not be challenged on the part of the neutral states by appealing to laws and usages of war whose validity rests on their forming an integral part of that system of international doctrine which, as a whole, the enemy frankly boasts the continuation to disregard so long as such neutral states cannot compel the German government to abandon recent history which have not in recent history been regarded as having the sanction of either law or humanity."

Use of Flag Defended.

The foreign office transmitted to Ambassador Page its reply to the American protest against a general use by British merchant vessels of the American flag.

The note admits that the Cunarder Lusitania on her most recent voyage from New York to Liverpool raised the American flag, but only "to save the lives of noncombatants, crew and passengers."

It denies that it is the intention of the British government to advise British merchant vessels to use foreign flags, but makes it clear that the use of foreign flags will be permitted. The note defending the practice cites the fact that the United States during the Civil war.

Three ships were blown up in the Germans' war zone, one of them a neutral vessel.

Feb. 22.—That the destruction of Zeppelins L-3 and L-4 has deprived the German admiralty of all its dignities is the assertion made by the Nieuws Van Den Dag.

Copenhagen, Feb. 22.—The Norwegian steamship Björke struck a mine in the North sea, while bound from Leth to Narstow with a cargo of coal, and foundered. The crew was saved.

HALT THE FIGHTING IN HAITI

United States Marines Stop the March of the Revolutionary Forces on the Capital.

Cape Haitien, Haiti, Feb. 22.—The march of the revolutionary forces of General Guillaume against Port-au-Prince has been stopped as the result of the landing of 400 United States Marines in the capital. Four United States warships are in the harbor at Port-au-Prince, and the situation there is described as critical.

AS TO FLOATING MINES

This is One of the Gravest Factors in the Situation—Signs That Great Britain Has Fears of the Blockade.

By A. M. JAMIESON.

(Special Correspondent of the International News Service at the White House.)

Washington, Feb. 22.—The United States will not accept Germany's disclaimer of responsibility for blowing up American merchantmen by German submarines, if any be sunk.

Whether any further negotiations in a reply to the German note to be sent by the United States, it is learned. The note will not be belligerent in manner, it was stated, but will leave no doubt as to the American position. It is expected the reply will be sent to the German foreign office early in the week and it is understood that the department now is drafting it in the direction of President Wilson.

Whether any further negotiations will be undertaken with the British government as a result of the latter's refusal to prohibit the use of the American flag on British merchantmen while in the war zone has not been determined. Great Britain, administration officials stated, clearly is within her rights under international law, and probably no further exceptions will be taken by the United States to the practice.

Floating Mines Cause Alarm.

One of the greatest factors in the situation is the threat of Germany to place floating mines in the shipping area surrounding Great Britain. These floating mines can be carried anywhere by the various currents of the Atlantic, and quite conceivably might blow up a ship in American coast waters.

It was stated by certain officials that their use is a clear violation of the Hague convention, and it is likely that this may form a central feature of the American reply to the German note.

The action of the British government in closing the English channel to all travel is regarded in Washington as extremely significant. It means, it was stated, that German submarines are already operating there.

TELLS OF TOWNS' CAPTURE

German Official Report Claims That Two Important Positions Have Been Taken From Enemy.

By FREDERICK WERNER.

(International News Service Correspondent.)

Berlin, Feb. 22 (via wireless).—The capture of two towns in the Vosges by the Germans in a strong offensive movement against the French troops southwest of Colmar is announced in an official report from the German general staff issued here.

The towns taken by the Germans are Metz and Sondernheim.

Hard fighting is in progress at other points in the Vosges mountains, where the Germans have stormed heights occupied by their foes.

The general staff report admits a slight setback for the Germans in the Champagne region of France, where the French have succeeded in entering some of the German advanced trenches.

In northern Poland, it says, the Russians have been driven back at various points.

Paris, Feb. 22.—Official dispatches from the north state that the Germans have again resumed their attacks against the British forces lying near Ypres. It is believed in some quarters that this is the opening of a strong offensive movement by the Germans, who evidently hope to strike some hard blows while preventing the transfer of any more English troops from the British Isles to the coast of France by means of the submarine blockade.

MEANS MUCH TO COMBATANTS

General Battle Now Going On in the Carpathians Will Have Great Effect on War.

Vienna, via Berlin and Amsterdam, Feb. 22.—Fighting in the Carpathians is developing into a general battle of great violence, it was announced at the war office.

The outcome of this conflict is regarded here as being of the greatest importance. The situation of the Austrian and German armies is asserted to be highly favorable to their ultimate success.

Unofficial estimates of the troops engaged on the Carpathian front fix the number of Russians at 600,000 and the Austro-German troops at 675,000—a total of 1,275,000.

NEWMAN CALLS
STATE TO ARMS

ASKS COUNTY JUDGES TO ISSUE CALL FOR MASS MEETINGS IN WAR ON CATTLE PLAGUE.

LETTERS ARE SENT BROADCAST

Government Sending 14 Experts To Assist—Dr. House Hears of Wholesale Indictments Expected.

(Special Frankfort Correspondence.)

Frankfort.—Chairman J. W. Newman, of the state livestock sanitary board, has appealed to the 120 county judges in Kentucky to call mass meetings of livestock owners and organize vigilance committees to combat the foot and mouth disease. All the men engaged in business at the Bourbon stockyards signed a circular letter which went to more than 1,000 sheep raisers asking them to co-operate with state and national authorities and induce the farmers to do likewise.

Eighteen infected cattle were found in Oldham county and the entire county was under quarantine. The stricken animals were slaughtered.

Another Jefferson county dairy farm was found to be infected. Its 86 cattle and 20 hogs were ordered destroyed. Dr. U. H. Houck, of Chicago, reputed to be the most successful foe of the foot and mouth disease in the government service, is here to confer with Dr. J. A. Payne, in charge of the government work here, and state, county and city officials. He is expected to remain until the end of the fight is in sight.

Wholesale Indictments.

Wholesale indictments as a result of violations of the cattle quarantine, involving fines and imprisonment, are predicted by J. W. Newman, state commissioner of agriculture, who declared that he intended to lay information before the Jefferson county grand jury immediately. With this end in view, he held a conference here. Forty-five whitetail deer are thriving in the game preserve in Bell county and an order has been placed with the Cleveland Cliffs Co. of Michigan for twenty adult deer. Information to these the three Japanese deer presented to the commission by Commissioner Burnam, who received them from a friend in New York, have been placed in the Blue Grass State preserve will be distributed throughout the state when conditions are favorable. Restocking the fields with quails is a problem on which the commission is working. Partridge have been secured to catch a large number of quails in Alabama and Florida; but arrangements to secure a supply in Mexico were frustrated by the discovery of a disease among them, which resulted in a government embargo on the exportation. The season for transportation from Cuba will close February 28, but the commission has succeeded in getting a contract for fifty pairs.

Fish and Game Improvement.

Progress and plans in the restocking of Kentucky with big game and birds and the streams with fish to be completed this season by the State Game and Fish Commission here.

Secretary Bryan's Letter Pleases.

No other honor that has been conferred upon him has pleased Gov. McCreary more, if so much, as that conveyed to him in a letter from Secretary of State W. J. Bryan, inclosing the copy of a resolution adopted by the Pan-American Union, thanking him for his portrait and ordered hung in the Palace of Peace, as the Pan-American Union building, Washington, is called, as "a reminder of the honorable service rendered by the donor to the republics of the western hemisphere." Secretary Bryan is chairman of the Pan-American Union and its members are the ambassadors and ministers from the twenty-one republics of South and Central America.

Secretary Bryan introduced the resolution. The portrait was the gift to Gov. McCreary of his staff officers, and Secretary Bryan asked that it be presented to the union to be hung with those of the union, the purpose of which is the development of good understanding, friendly intercourse, commerce and peace among the countries represented.

Stockmen Granted Immunity.

J. W. Newman, chairman of the State Livestock Sanitary Board, offered immunity from prosecution to all persons who volunteer information as to cattle in their possession infected with the foot and mouth disease. Every head of cattle taken from the Bourbon Stockyards for immediate slaughter according to law, and afterward sold in violation of the quarantine regulations, must be traced and the danger of further infection passes and before the quarantine is lifted," Mr. Newman said. "Information, therefore, is the thing most desired by federal, state, county and city officials. Two hundred or more cattle which should have been slaughtered have been sold by butchers to dairymen and others. The state and federal inspectors are searching Jefferson and Bullitt counties, and even other counties, every day to find these cattle. Owners who refuse information will be fined from $10 to $50 for each animal."

Helps in Maryland War On Illiteracy.

Mrs. Cora Wilson Stewart, founder of "moonlight" schools, and president of the Kentucky Illiteracy commission, has just returned from a trip East, during which she assisted in inaugurating the Maryland campaign against illiteracy at Baltimore. She was greatly pleased with her reception and the assurance of sympathy and co-operation with her work on the part of the national administration. The illiteracy commission will meet in a short time and award the prizes.

AN AMERICAN
STEAMER SUNK

OFF COAST OF GERMANY—ANOTHER VESSEL DESTROYED IN IRISH SEA.

Spot Where the Evelyn Enters Depths Is Not Included in the War Zone.

Western Newspaper Union News Service.

Bremen, via London.—The American steamer Evelyn, which sailed from New York, January 29, with a cargo of cotton for Bremen, struck a mine off Borkum Island, in the North Sea, and was sunk.

The vessel sank. Her Captain and 27 of her crew were saved. The Evelyn is the first American vessel to meet with disaster as a result of the seizure of the European nations. She did not sink within the war zone included in the German Admiralty's decree of February 4, which went into effect. Borkum Island lies directly off the German coast, at the mouth of the Elms River, and is German territory.

The Evelyn was a single screw steamship and was commanded by Captain Smith. She belonged to A. H. Bull & Co., of New York, and was chartered by the Harris, Iry & Voce Cotton Co. to take a cargo of cotton to Bremen. She was 252 feet long and 1,185 tons net. She was built in Southampton, England, in 1883. Her home port was Philadelphia. The Evelyn was last reported as arriving at Rotterdam February 17.

Irish Coaster Blown Up.

London.—The small Irish coasting steamer Downshire was sunk by a German submarine off Calt of Man Island, in the Irish Sea. The Germans gave the crew five minutes in which to leave their ship. The crew landed at Dundrum, County Down, Ireland.

The submarine which sank the Downshire was the U 12. The Germans fired three shots at the steamer before her captain dove. After the crew of the Downshire had taken to the boats the Germans placed a bomb amidships and the steamer exploded and it, and the Downshire sank in a few minutes.

To Tobacco Growers and Friends in Madison and Adjoining Counties:

About five years ago the MADISON TOBACCO WAREHOUSE CO. established the market here for the sale of loose leaf tobacco, putting its money in a warehouse before it was in any way assured of buyers. Its beginning was small; its capital was $10,000. After two years its capital was increased to $33,000, in order that it could add more floor space this money was expended in a NEW STEEL STRUCTURE. Last season it still needed more room and its capital was again increased to $40,000. This money was used to make the addition to the new steel house, until today it feels proud of its house having everything that a first class warehouse could have for the successful handling of tobacco; proud of that confidence in our methods that made the house possible; proud of the market right at home; prouder still that it was always one of the very highest markets in the State; proud that by this market we could see paid out in dollars here every year money aggregating possibly a MILLION DOLLARS; proud to be able to give employment to enough of our citizens to make a pay roll of $500.00 weekly for over four months in each year; proud of enabling our lumber merchants to sell thousands of hogheads and other merchants hundreds of dollars in dry goods, clothing, groceries, etc., it keeping this enormous amount of money at home and in circulation; proud of the fact that notwithstanding its enemies, it has grown each and every year, until now it is the third or fourth largest market in the State. If these are facts, and they are, you cannot blame us for standing firm for the child of our creation. This we expect to do, especially in view of the fact that Richmond market has had more than a square deal, FOR ITS PRICES WERE HIGHER LAST YEAR THAN ANY IN THE STATE. No body could expect or desire more. This year we have held our own with any of them. Is such a market worth anything to our community?

We sold this week a crop at an average of $20 per hundred; another averaged $17, another $15.70, another $14.80, a dozen above $12, market right up on all grades all the time. Can we or you expect more than this?

Sales Every Day Rain Or Shine

Thanking every man, woman or child who ever sold a pound of tobacco on our floor, thanking everybody who ever spoke a good word for us or our market, We are respectfully yours,

Kentucky History—By Chas. Keith.

Mr. Chas. A. Keith, our fellow townsman and head of the Historical Department of the Eastern State Normal, is receiving congratulations on his splendid work just from the hands of the publishers—"A Supplement on Kentucky History." It is a valuable addition to the list of historical works now used in the schools throughout the country, bringing the history of Kentucky down to date. The author's style is clear and concise and the subject matter clothed in the most charming language.

The following preliminary will give some idea of the attractive manner in which the subject is treated: "In fullness of history, Kentucky ranks with her parent State—Virginia—and with States like Massachusetts, New York and Texas; in productiveness of political and military leadership, she ranks with our first Commonwealth; and in character and educative value her record is almost unique. Like that of Tennessee, her history reads like a novel. The daring and chivalrous deeds of her native sons furnish us names for many counties. There are crises in the life of the State that are thrilling as well as perplexing; and it is to her lasting honor that, though blundering occasionally, she emerged from them with discretion and credit."

Mr. Keith's Civics will shortly appear from the press of this office. With other interested friends, we extend to the author our cordial congratulations.

Dr. R. L. Breck Dead.

Dr. Robt. L. Breck died at his home in Palo Alto, Cal., on the 15th inst., aged 88 years.

Dr. Breck was perhaps one of the most distinguished citizens of Madison County. He was born in this city May 8th, 1827, and spent the greater part of his life here. He was the son of Judge Daniel Breck, who was one of the most eminent of Kentucky's lawyers, and was a Judge of the Court of Appeals from 1843 to 1849, and also a member of the 31st Congress. He was a brother of our distinguished lawyer, Judge C. H. Breck, who survives him.

Dr. Breck was a graduate of Central College, Danville, and studied theology at Alleghany Seminary and Princeton, being a classmate of Dr. Joseph Wilson, father of President Wilson. When Dr. Breck married Miss Martha Rodes, of Richmond, in 1847, Dr. Wilson was his groomsmen.

Dr. Breck was a noted educator and was regarded as one of the ablest divines in the State. His first charge was the Presbyterian church at Versailles, and he held charges in other States, his last pastorate being at Berkeley, Cal. The remains were brought to this city last Saturday and were accompanied by his daughter, Mrs. Hugh A. Moran and other relatives, and laid to rest by the side of his beloved wife. Many friends collected in the grave. Judge Breck was ill and unable to attend the funeral. In our next issue we will give a more extended account of the life of this good man.

PAINT LICK.

A familiar face is not seen on our streets now in the person of Wm. Gaffney, who is ill with pneumonia. Several sons and daughters of Mr. and Mrs. L. O. Rucker have been with their father during his recent illness. John L. Coldiron our leading coal dealer, has leased the coal yards of Burman & Rucker. A. J. Riddle is building a residence on the lot recently purchased from Dr. Jno. Snowden. Rev. Reagan, the district superintendent of the Methodist church, preached at Walnutta church Saturday night and Sunday.

Master Sauley Hughes, of Lancaster, is spending several days with his grandparents, Mr. Jas. Francis and wife. Conn Asher, of Livingston, was a recent visitor here. Mr. and Mrs. C. S. Ellis entertained the B. Y. P. U. on Friday night. The young people enjoyed many games and Mrs. Ellis served delightful refreshments.

Bro. Ellis is a wide-awake pastor and the Baptists should hold up his hands and aid in the good things he wishes them to do. Mrs. H. L. Wallace entertained the W. C. T. U. on Wednesday, "Frances E. Willard Day." After the program, luncheon was served to the members and visitors.

"THE WOLF"

This Well-Known Play At Alhambra Today.

"The Wolf" is a drama taken from the book and play of that name. It was played in this city a few years ago and was the hit of the season. "The Wolf" will be presented today in 6 reels, with Lubin's most famous actress, Miss Ethel Clayton, at the Alhambra Theatre. A record breaking house expected, so attend the matinee and avoid the rush at night.

Thursday, we present for the last time Mr. Francis X. Bushman in "The Plum Tree," a prize mystery drama from the Ladies World. Seven (7) reels will be shown. Don't miss these two big features. You will enjoy them both.

Oratorical Contest.

The annual oratorical contest of Caldwell High School was held in the auditorium of that building Friday night. The contestants were Alfred Douglas, representing the Freshman class, whose subject was "Billy Brad and a Big Lie." The young gentleman gave every evidence of an orator and he was named by many as the winner. Following this came Mr. Neville Todd, of the Sophomore class, whose subject was "Shadow's Pardon." He delivered himself very pleasingly. Mr. Frank Powell, of the Junior class spoke on "Freedom and Patriotism," and held the attention of the audience. Then came Mr. Joe Giunchiglian Jr., on "The Secret of Lincoln's Power," and he delivered himself with characteristic individuality.

In the girls' contest Miss Mossie Allman recited "The Swan Song" very, very beautifully. She was followed by Miss Frances Keist, of the Sophomore class, whose subject was "Threadneedle Street." She was very graceful and enthusiastic in her delivery. Miss Elizabeth Terrill, of the Junior class, recited the touching story of "The Little Newsboy." Miss Terrill has a most charming personality and her delivery was most excellent. Miss Katie Smith, of the Senior class, delivered "The Song of the Violin" and in doing so was as charming as the declaration.

Proceeding and during the recitations, the High School Orchestra discoursed some well chosen selections.

The enthusiastic admirers of the different contestants tested their lung capacity throughout the evening and added much to the merriment of the occasion.

Then came the most exciting part of it all. The judges, Rev. R. L. Telford, Prof. Caldwell, of this city, and Mr. Darnaby, of Winchester, retired and consulted, deliberated, voted and with some difficulty reached a conclusion, after which Mr. Darnaby was escorted to the rostrum, where he announced the decision. Mr. Frank Powell proved to be the winner in the boys' contest and was awarded a five-dollar gold piece. Miss Mossie Allman was the winner in the girls' contest and likewise received a shining five-dollar gold coin.

The evening was a very happy and pleasant one, long to be remembered by the contestants and their friends.

Convicted Banker Visits His Dying Daughter.

Mrs. Edith Alexander Bronston, daughter of George Alexander, of Paris, the convicted banker, was lying critically ill in a hospital in that city, suffering from double pneumonia and Bright's disease, and it is said that worry over her father's predicament greatly contributed to and aggravated her sufferings. Her father, who was confined in the Paris jail, was permitted, under escort of an officer, to visit his daughter last Sunday. Mrs. Edith A. Bronston died on Friday afternoon, aged 35 years, at the Massie Memorial Hospital in Paris. She was the widow of Hughes J. Bronston, who died in December, 1912, of pneumonia. When her father, who was placed in the Frankfort Reformatory Friday morning, was informed of his daughter's death, he showed much emotion and asked to be allowed to attend the funeral, but was refused, as it is against the law to permit convicts to leave the prison on such missions.

Good Roads.

The election held for good roads in Bell county last week carried in favor of good roads by a large majority, and work will start upon these roads in the early spring and will be complete before the end of the year. It is thought the overwhelming majority given the road bond issue in Bell county will be an incentive for the other counties—Knox, Laurel and Rockcastle, which are to vote bonds mainly to build the connecting link in Boone's Way to the Blue grass section of Kentucky.

E. W. Lillard Kills Himself.

Colonel E. W. Lillard, former Representative in the Legislature from Boyle county, shot and killed himself at his home on South Second street in Danville, Ky., Wednesday. As a member of the Legislature he gained wide notice through three other Democrats who deserted Governor J. C. W. Beckham, the Democratic nominee, and voted for the late W. O. Bradley, who was elected United States Senator. He left nothing to indicate that he was in his tragic act.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

Governor McCreary Highly Honored.

No other honor that has been conferred upon him has pleased Gov. McCreary more, if as much, as that conveyed to him in a letter from Secretary of State W. J. Bryan, inclosing the copy of a resolution adopted by the Pan-American Union, thanking him for his portrait, ordered hung in the Palace of Peace.

Former Pastor Dead.

Rev. Homer T. Wilson, aged 65 years, writer and Lyceum lecturer, died at his home in San Antonio, Texas, last week. He was a native of Kentucky, and filled pastorates here and in Mississippi, Alabama and Texas. For twenty years he was national chaplain of the Travelers' Protective Association. He was popular here and had many friends.

Bank at Valley View Closed.

The Valley View Bank has dissolved on account of a deficiency in business at that point, due to the loss of the lumber industry. The bank will pay out dollar for dollar on all claims against it.

Circuit Court.

The Circuit Court has been busily engaged in the trial of criminal and civil cases and has disposed of many of the most important.

Wm. Francis, Jake Bronston and Joe Tevis, gentlemen of color, were sent to the penitentiary for three years each for stealing hides from Wides.

Ed Smith and Charles Smith were sent up for five years for stealing cattle from A. McCown.

Abbe Chastine drew a penalty of two years, neither more nor less for shooting William Maupin. It will be borne in mind that last fall Chastine unlawfully shot into Mr. Maupin and Claude Devore, two of the city police force, who were trying to arrest the obstreperous gentleman. He had been in hiding for some months, but was recently apprehended at Mt. Vernon and will soon be removed to Frankfort to begin boarding.

Zep Elmore was convicted for stealing coal from a common carrier. Zep says he took only one lump, but the Court informed him that that was one lump too many.

The case of the Commonwealth against Carl Park, charged with the seduction of Miss Tracy, was dismissed. During the progress of the trial Park offered to marry Miss Tracy, which offer was refused. Thereupon the Court dismissed the case.

The case of Murray, eto., vs. Todd, eto., was decided for the defendant.

Young Tipton handled an average of 101 messages an hour, totaling 900 messages for the day. The record for a single hour is 122, but 116 messages which Tipton sent in one hour contained more words than the 122 messages which is the world's record. He was congratulated by the various superintendents upon his excellent work.

SOME DON'TS

For Stomach and Liver Sufferers

Don't take medicine for your Stomach ailments morning, noon and night, as usually such medicines only give temporary relief and simply digest the food that happens to be in the Stomach.

Don't persist in a surgical operation. There is always serious danger in operations and in many cases of Stomach, Liver and Intestinal Ailments the knife can be avoided if the right remedy is taken in time.

Don't go around with a foul smelling breath caused by a disordered Stomach and Liver, to the discomfort of those you come in contact with. If you are a Stomach sufferer, don't think you can not be helped; probably worse cases than yours have been permanently restored by May's Wonderful Remedy.

Most Stomach ailments are mainly caused by a catarrhal condition. May's Wonderful Remedy not only removes the catarrhal mucus, but allays the chronic inflammation and assists in rendering the entire alimentary and intestinal tract antiseptic, and this is the secret of its marvelous success.

Don't suffer constant pain and agony and allow your stomach ailments to physically undermine your health. No matter how severe your case may be or how long you have suffered—one dose of May's Wonderful Remedy should convince you that you can be restored to health again. May's Wonderful Remedy has been taken and is highly recommended by Members of Congress, Justice of the Supreme Court, Educators, Lawyers, Merchants, Bankers, Doctors, Druggists, Nurses, Manufacturers, Priests, Ministers, Farmers and people in all walks of life.

Don't let a valuable booklet on Stomach Ailments to Geo. H. May, 154-156 Whiting St., Chicago, Ill. May's Wonderful Remedy is sold by leading druggists everywhere with the positive understanding that your money will be refunded without question or quibble if ONE bottle fails to give you absolute satisfaction.

Death of Mrs. Perkins.
On Sunday evening at 9 o'clock Mrs.
Anthony Perkins died at the Gibson Infirmity after a week's illness of appendicitis. Her death was unexpected and came as quite a shock to her family and friends, as she had seemed to improve since her operation and had shown so much vitality and courage, but on Sunday afternoon she suddenly grew worse and lasted only a few hours. She was the oldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. T.
C. Vaughn of this city, and had been a bride just a few short months. Mrs.
Perkins was a sweet, lovable young woman with many beautiful traits of character that has won her many friends, all of whom will miss her and mourn her death. The funeral was held at the residence of her father on Broadway
Tuesday morning at 10 o'clock, conducted by Rev. J. R. Reynolds, of the Baptist church, assisted by Rev. E. B. Barnes, after which her remains were taken by loving friends to the grave in the Richmond Cemetery. She was buried beneath a bank of beautiful flowers. It is inexpressible sad that one so young should be taken but God knows best and we bow in submission to his will. Much sympathy is extended to the grief-stricken family in their sad bereavement.

To Farmers And Stock Men of Madison County.
Acting under orders of John W. Newman, State Commissioner of Agriculture, I hereby call a meeting of all the stock raisers and shippers in Madison county, to be held at the Court House in Richmond at 2 p. m. on Saturday, February 27th.

The purpose of said meeting is to effect an organization among the stock men of this county to enforce a quarantine regulation and thereby protect their stock from infection by the foot and mouth disease.

The failure of persons to comply with the quarantine regulations has caused a new and virulent outbreak of this disease and authorities state will absolutely destroy the live stock interests in Kentucky unless it is stopped.

These regulations are for the protection of the owners of live stock. Unless they are observed by everybody, they will be of no value.

I am directed by the authorities to urge every man interested in the live stock business in Madison county, to be present at this meeting, and said authorities state that unless something is done instantly, that the whole cattle interest in Madison county is liable to be destroyed. W. R. Shackelford, County Judge Madison County.

Church Notes

Sunday was a great day at the Baptist church; large congregations morning and night. The house was crowded at the morning service and chairs were carried in from the lecture room. The Sunday-school continues to grow in interest and attendance. The subject of Rev. Reynolds' sermon next Sunday morning is "Greatness of the Great Commission;" in the evening, the subject for his sermon is "Love."

Prayer meeting at the Baptist church
last Wednesday evening well attended.
Everybody invited to all the services.

The attendance at the First Christian church Bible school Sunday last, 34; offering, $19.20. We hope to see a large number presents next Sunday.

The congregations last Sunday at the First Christian church were unusually large at both services. In the morning
Rev. Barnes spoke on the theme, "What Think Ye of Christ?" and at night on "The Man Who Went to Seek a City."
The men were out in a body, as usual,
at the evening service.

The subject of Dr. Barnes' sermon for next Sunday night is "The Man Who Took the Best and Got the Worst." You will want to hear about him. The series of sermons has created a great interest in these Old Testament characters. The men will be there, we predict.

On Friday evening at the Mansonic Temple one of the prettiest Germans of the season was danced; the leaders being Miss Hester Covington and Mr. Sam Parkes Burnam. The Opera House Orchestra furnished the music, which is always inspiring. The dressing was handsome, the weather ideal, so altogether the affair may be classed as one of the successes of the late winter. The chaperons were: Mr. and Mrs. T. H. Pickles, Mrs. D. B. Shackelford,
and Mrs. George Goodloe, and Mrs. J. B.
Stouffer. Among the guests were: Misses
Lewis and Hamilton, the guests of Mrs.
Hale Dean and Miss Hester Covington and Miss Frances, who has been with Miss Elath Buchanan, and Messrs. Chas. H.
Vaught, Ed. Cobb, James Park, Curt Park,
Gaines Jasper, of this city, and William

In Society

The Knights of Pythias Lodge, of this city, held an open session on last Thursday night, it being the Fifty-first Anniversary of the institution of the order in the United States. Hon. M. George Moore, Superintendent of the Knights of Pythias Home at Lexington, and Hon. John W. Carter, Grand Keeper of Records and Seal, also of Lexington, were in attendance and each made interesting addresses, after the conclusion of which a sumptuous feast was spread and heartily enjoyed by the members and assembled guests. During the feast Dr. E. C. McDougale, Messrs.
Frank Leslie Russell, Ben A. Crutcher,
Grant E. Lilly, O. P. Jackson and C. S.
Jesup were called on and responded with brief, appropriate addresses. The meeting adjourned at the midnight hour with a feeling of good cheer. A handsome sum was raised for the benefit of the Orphans' Home.

The marriage of Miss Dorothy Kellogg and Mr. Charles Jasper McLaughlin, was beautifully celebrated on last Monday evening at Grace Episcopal church in Avondale, Cincinnati. The bride is the youngest daughter of Mrs. Charles H. Kellogg, of Cincinnati, and is a highly cultured and prominent young society belle. The groom is a rising young artist of this city. Miss Kellogg was given in marriage by her brother, Mr. Clark Kellogg. Miss Madge Burnam and Miss Marie Louise Kellogg acted as bridesmaids and were very charming in dainty white nets, carrying an arrangement of Killarney roses. The bride was radiant in a soft cream satin gown, and carried a shower bouquet of bride roses and asparagus vine caught with bunches of valley lilies and tulips, and was enveloped in a tall veil, which fell to the foot of her gown. After the ceremony an elegant supper was served at the home of the bride's mother, after which the happy couple left for a short Southern tour. On their return they will make their home in Cincinnati. The bride is well and favorably known here, where she has often visited Mr. and Mrs. M. C. Kellogg, and has many friends who extend them their congratulations and best wishes.

Miss Jeanette Pates entertained on Saturday from three till five o'clock with a "Washington 500," given in compliment to her charming visitors, Misses Vivian and Mary Clay Williams, two classmates of Hamilton College. The parlor and dining room were attractively decorated with hatches, cherries and flags. In the arch-way were streamers of red, white and blue, in the center of which were hung the portraits of George and Martha Washington.
The tables were hatchets on the handles of which were tied bunches of red cherries.
The games were succeeded by a salad course carrying out the idea of the 22nd, after which the prizes, a pretty handkerchief and a box of blue stationery were awarded. Miss Eleanor Hagan and Miss

weather ideal, so altogether the affair may be classed as one of the successes of the late winter. The chaperons were: Mr. and
Mrs. T. H. Pickles, Mrs. D. B. Shackelford,
and Mrs. George Goodloe, and Mrs. J. B.

Corinth, Miss.—"I am a city tax collector and seventy-four years of age. I was in a weak, run-down condition so that I became exhausted by every little exertion. My druggist told me about Vinol, and I decided to take it. In a week I noticed considerable improvement; I continued its use and now I have gained twenty pounds in weight, and feel much stronger. RUNAWAY JUNE

FIFTH EPISODE.

A Woman in Trouble.

AT old black Aunt Debby was dressed in her best marketing clothes, the green percale with the big yellow flowers, and the little blue hat with the nodding red poppies was set far forward on her head. The marketing trip to the city had been one of Aunt Debby's chief joys, but today the buoyancy and the high pitched laugh of excitement were absent.

"You'll stop at Ned's for Mr. Moore, Debby," said Mrs. Moore.

"Yassum." Aunt Debby stole a glance at June's portrait on the wall. "You— you ain't heard nothin' yet of Miss June?"

At the sound of that name Bouncer rose instantly, head up, ears perked, tail wagging, eyes eager, mouth open. He was at the window with his paws on the sill and ready to bark. He whined instead and dropped his paws to the floor.

Where was June? That puzzling problem filled the entire mind of Aunt Debby as by the side of the driver she upon into the city in the Moore limousine. And that puzzling problem filled the entire mind of John Moore as he sat in his office.

Today the Buoyancy and High Pitched Laugh Were Absent.

Where was June? A dozen private detectives were scouring the city of New York for her, and they reported to a stern faced young man who sat in the lonely apartment which June and he had fitted up to be their nest, his only companion a miniature of his lovely bride.

Where was June? Who was this mysterious Gilbert Blythe? What was his power over Ned Warner's bride? Ned seized his hat and strode forth into the streets in his never ending search for June.

At that moment the door of a strange house had slammed abruptly behind beautiful June Warner. And Gilbert Blythe had furnished this address to June's employment agency.

A blonde looking page girl inspected June impudently in the dim light of the hall, then with a significant grin left June standing there and swaggered through a door at the end of the hall. June was startled as that door opened and a blaze of light came out with the chatter of many shrill voices. In there, amid wreaths of curling blue smoke, moved handsomely dressed women, and many of them nonchalantly puffed at cigarettes. At that instant the smiling Gilbert Blythe's key grated in the lock.

A large yellow haired woman came hurrying from the salon with June's employment agency card in her hand.

"Right this way, honey," she rasped in a voice to which the honey was for cloy, and she led the way to a small side room at the left of the salon. As June reluctantly entered the strangely furnished little room at the left Gilbert Blythe came in at the front door. With a smile upon his lips and a glint in his dark eyes he hurried straight back toward the little room in which stood June, now alone and frightened. At that instant a huge, clumsy maid came tumbling up from the basement, followed by a puff of yellow smoke. With her eyes distended and her mouth open, ready for the yell of "Fire!" she rushed to the door of the salon, but before she could reach it Gilbert Blythe had her roughly by the arm and pushed her through the door which led to the basement. He stood staring at the smoke which came curling out through that opening, glanced again toward June's room and dashed down the stairs.

That was a strangely furnished little room in which June found herself. There were two desks and a filing cabinet and some office chairs, but there were a luxurious couch and dainty hangings, a soft rug and pink paneled walls and ceiling. It was all so incongruous. And the work—it was queer too. The yellow haired woman came in from the parlor presently and explained the posting into small blank books of many memorandum slips. Each slip contained the name of a woman and a sum of money. There were no slips for men, but there were index cards about men. June puzzled as to what sort of business this might be.

The page girl switched in with one of the memorandum slips. The yellow head, whose face was puffy and more highly colored than was wholesome, took the slip, looked at the name on it, frowned, shook her head and went out with the girl. She entered the salon and stood surveying the scene with cold abstraction. Around a long table sat the women whom June had seen. They all had cards in front of them and stacks of playing chips, and a row of women sitting on a higher chair than the rest was dealing. The yellow haired woman fixed her attention on the gambler next to the dealer. She was a fluffy blond with a feverish glitter in her eyes, and she was bent so far forward that she could not see the door open and close.

Poor June! She glanced about her with growing repugnance. She was miserably miserable, and suddenly she was sobbing.

Ned! Why had she run away from him?

In the gambling room the fluffy blond who had played so feverishly staked and lost the chips in front of her. She turned impatiently to look for the page girl. She met instead the cold, hard eye of the yellow haired woman, who quietly motioned her. The player rose reluctantly, and fright came into her face as she followed into the hall and to the little office where June had been installed.

"You've reached the limit, Mrs. Perry," announced the yellow haired woman, turning on the unlucky one sharply as she closed the door. Here is your I. O. U. Belle brought to me. I have not O. K. d it.

"It's only for $50," faltered Mrs. Perry.

"I wouldn't O. K. it for 50 cents," snapped the yellow haired woman. "You'll telephone your husband from this room."

"No, no!" The woman wrung her hands. "I'll talk to him tonight!"

"I know that game," she scorned, and from June's desk she took an index card.

"Eight-o-eight-o Garden," she told the new secretary. "Ask for Mr. Perry, and say that his wife wishes to speak with him."

"No!" cried Mrs. Perry hysterically, and reached over June's shoulder to take the phone. The new secretary had made no move toward the phone. She was staring at the yellow haired woman in astonishment.

The yellow haired woman was not one to wrangle in emergencies. She snatched up the phone herself and called the number.

"You women think I'm a mark," she scornfully stated to Mrs. Perry while she waited. "You'd sting me for a thousand dollars rather than sting your husband for it. See this card?" She held it out. It contained the name of Jackson W. Perry, his business address, his home address, his financial rating, probable income, clubs and telephone numbers. And the unfortunate Mrs. Perry seemed to shrink into hopeless despair as she realized the implacable organization against which she had pitted her self. "Mr. Perry, please." The yellow haired woman's voice had undergone a complete change. It was very pleasant, inflected though it was with a "His wife wishes to speak with him."

She handed over the telephone, and June, seeing Mrs. Perry's unsteadiness, rose and compassionately gave the woman her chair. The yellow haired one walked calmly over to her own desk and took up the extension phone.

June looked at her hat and coat. She seemed quite bewildered. She could not quite understand what this was all about, but she did know that it was all unpleasant and heartless and degrading. She was starting to go when she was stopped by the yellow haired woman's sympathetic and held her.

"Yes, it's Gwen," trembled Mrs. Perry, her nervous fingers clutching desperately to keep the quaver from her voice. "I—I hope I haven't interrupted anything important."

"Not very." The man's voice could be heard distinctly outside the phone. "Jack—the voice was full of pleading—"I—I have to have some money."

The crown of the yellow haired woman deepened as she listened to the man's reply.

"I know it's a week before my allowance is due," urged Mrs. Perry, and now she turned her eyes imploringly toward the stony, yellow haired one.

"But I just must have it! Eight hundred dollars!"

The man's voice boomed an incredulous exclamation over the wire; then a sharp question.

"Why—why, it's to pay bills! Yes, yes, Jack, I know I was supposed to keep them paid out of my allowance! I didn't want to tell you this until we could sit down quietly together, only they've pressed me for payment! And the allowance isn't enough, Jackson! Yes, I know you've raised it—oh!"

The man's heavy voice had interrupted her calmly, coldly. She sank back limply in the chair.

June hung up the receiver. She was surprised to see the yellow haired woman put up her own phone and come across the room with a benign expression.

"Cheer up," she advised. "Hubby's all right."

Mrs. Perry straightened up. "Yes," she said and moistened her lips. "But what he'd go over there with the confound!" And the yellow haired woman grinned across at June. "Here's your I. O. U., dearie. I've O. K. d it. You better go in and play awhile for your nerves."

The terrified little blond looked up incredulously. It was as if she had been given a drink of some strong stimulant, and she clutched eagerly at the memorandum slip. Perhaps with that she could win back all that she had lost!

"Thank you!" she gasped and hurried from the room.

The other woman grabbed her phone. "Eight-o-eight-o Garden," she called. "Hello, Mr. Perry, please. This is his wife's friend."

June moved for her hat and coat.

"Hello, Mr. Perry! Say, your wife is at 48 Kingsley court gambling, and she's going to be exposed in half an hour if you aren't here to pay her debts."

The man at the other end of the wire apparently took a moment to gasp for breath; then the wire boomed.

"All right, bring the police if you want," snapped the yellow haired woman. "I guess I can stand the notoriety if you and your wife can. And, say, checks don't go. Bring cash. It's eight-fifty now."

June stood aghast. A gambling house.

CHAPTER II.

ON the corner near Mrs. O'Keefe's home Officer Grady walked over to lift his cap politely and to help Marie across the street with her empty market basket. Two blocks up Officer Dowd carried her basket of blocks off his back to where Officer Kernan held up the traffic both ways while she described the chicken people she intended to make for dinner. All this was, first, because the Widow O'Keefe's husband had been the most popular man on the force and, second, because Marie, plain of feature though she was, had found in herself an unexpected knack for pleasing policemen.

In the market June's maid, companion and protector wandered from stall to stall, selecting her tiny purchases of fruit and vegetables. She was just deciding on the tremendously important selection of the chicken itself when suddenly an avalanche of familiar color fell upon her and a voice cried:

"You, Marie? What's Miss June? I say, what's Miss June?"

Aunt Debby! Her two fat black hands were gripped on Marie's arm. A crowd began to gather immediately. Marie straightened herself stiffly.

"I do not know you!" she declared. "You don't know me!" Aunt Debby wheezed, her broad bosom jumping up and down. "You say you don't know me? Ain't I Debby? Ain't you Marie?"

Marie with a sudden jerk freed herself from that earnest grasp and would have been far down the street had it not been for the thickening crowd. Aunt Debby, plunging forward with unbelievable agility, threw both arms around her.

"What's the matter here?" The gruff voice of a big policeman.

"I want that woman took in charge!" Aunt Debby, and she rolled her eyes.

"Oh, you do?" And the officer of the law turned on Marie an eye which was perfectly ready to be suspicious in spite of its disimulation. "What's the charge?"

The voice of Aunt Debby rose shrilly triumphant.

"She done stole my pocketbook!"

"It was Marie's turn to look astounded. "Oh, she did! When? Here in the market?"

"Yes, sir, she did. Right up by the chicken stand!"

"Well, what's that on your arm?" And Aunt Debby's eyes dropped as she saw the stern gaze of the policeman fixed on the rusted old hand bag which gripped her thick forearm. She had forgotten that detail in her planning. "Open it up," ordered the officer, who opened it himself. It had bills and silver in it. Aunt Debby's reading spectacles and her farsighted eyes, some peppermint lozenges, a brunette face powder and a tea biscuit.

"Well—well—well!" gulped Aunt Debby, her eyes battling. "She done stole my other pocketbook!"

"That's enough!" growled the officer. "No negro ever had two pocketbooks! What have you got to say, miss?"

And he was quite respectful to Marie. "I don't know her, Mr. Officer," smiled Marie.

"You, Marie," screamed Aunt Debby, "you say you don't know me?"

"Go on about your business," ordered the big policeman.

"I don't leave this spot without that girl!" declared Aunt Debby, planting her fists on her hips and spreading her feet apart. Then the outraged majesty of the law asserted itself.

"Hey, Billy! Call the wagon!" it yelled.

"Please don't arrest her!" begged Marie.

She was too late; the wagon had been called.

"Sorry, miss," said the officer who had first interfered, "but this party went too far." And he turned to help the culprit in.

"Oh, Mr. Dowd!" The voice of Marie was suddenly bright and care free. The three policemen who had been assisting Aunt Debby turned quickly as Officer Dowd pushed smilingly through the crowd to the side of Marie.

"What's the trouble?" he inquired.

Marie whispered her explanation. "Let the smoke go, boys," requested Officer Dowd carelessly. "It's all a mistake."

"Now you hiker!" ordered the policeman and gave Aunt Debby a poke in the ribs.

Slowly she waddled to the chicken market, where she found her basket intact in the stall of the poultryman. And slowly she walked up a block to the adjacent avenue, where stood the Moore limousine.

"Jerry," she called as she climbed breathlessly to her seat by the driver. "I done seed Marie! And what she goes Miss June is!"

The car was already started.

"Where?" asked Jerry, all quivering eagerness.

Aunt Debby's eyes rolled. She could talk no more, but she made a circular motion with her hand, and Jerry understood.

There seemed to be small profit in circulating, and after a few minutes of this tedious process Aunt Debby, who seemed to be tremendously prolific of ideas today, said:

"Mistah Ned!"

To Ned's they drove, and within five minutes after Aunt Debby's excited report Ned Warner and John Moore and three long and lanky detectives were headed for the market, with Jerry and Aunt Debby up in front. At that point they scattered, and it was Ned whose inquiries after Marie led all the way to Officer Dowd.

CHAPTER III.

HABY yawned, firm mouthed, square jawed and level eyed man stopped at the door of 48 Kingsley court and rang the bell with a vigorous jerk.

"Mr. Perry," he announced bluntly.

"Yes, sir," replied the impudent page girl, by no means ashamed, and she threw open the parlor door. "Right in here."

She grinned as she switched on the lights for him and saw that he was oppressed by the fact of the drawn curtains.

The yellow haired woman found him standing solidly in the center of the room, facing the door.

"Where is my wife?" he loudly demanded.

"Don't bark at me!" snapped the yellow haired woman.

The man abated none of its intensity as he repeated his demand.

"In a minute." The yellow haired woman was quite calm and collected. "I don't mind turning over a parlor to settle a domestic quarrel. I want my bill settled first. Eight-fifty."

"How do I know that she is guilty of gambling? How do I know that she is here?"

"The woman's lip curled.

"What do you mean by the goods? Well, Jackson, if you'll promise to behave I'll show her to you through a peephole."

The man's fists clinched convulsively. "You'd better pass over my eight-fifty first," said the yellow haired woman.

"Just a minute, please." A sweet voice, low, gentle, cultured—no such voice as the man had expected to hear in this place. He was usually in the habit of when he turned and saw the beautiful young girl who had glided through the rear door, her face full of serious purpose.

"Who rang for you?" snapped the yellow haired woman, her eyes flaming with instant resentment.

"I stayed in this house for no other reason than to see Mr. Perry," announced June, with no trace of timidity about her.

"What do you know about that?"

"Mrs. Perry is in deep trouble and needs your help."

"She had no reason to be in trouble. I give my wife an ample allowance." The man turned from June.

"You give it?" Across June's mind there flashed again the whole of her own vital problem—that whatever the wife has must come from the husband in the nature of charity. She saw her self again as the pitiful little beggar before Ned, whom she loved, and she saw Mrs. Perry in that same attitude before this stern husband. "What right have you to call it a gift?"

The man stopped and turned to June with a puzzled look. She had said as if in a new thought.

"This angel of mercy stuff is bad for profits," rasped the voice of the yellow haired woman. "But I can't overlook a chance like this. I know your kind, Jackson Perry. You give your wife an allowance that covers everything but emergencies. You figure the plumber to come in three times a year, and if he comes in four she loses. If she has a mad passion to treat a few of her friends to ice cream soda she has to wait till next month's allowance day. If she ever saved $25 you'd reduce her pay. I'll bet this poor little wife of yours first got into trouble through losing $2 in a friendly penny auction game, and she's been trying to overtake it ever since."

A gentle hand was laid on the man's arm.

"You will help her?" The low, sweet voice was full of more than appeal; it was full of trust and confidence.

There was a slight convulsive heaving of Perry's shoulders, but that was all. He drew out his pocketbook and counted some money into the yellow haired woman's hand.

"Now, bring Gwen to me," he said, and his voice had no harshness, his eyes no sternness, his smile no bitterness.

With moist eyes June hurried from the room. She was glad that she had stayed here, glad that she had come very glad indeed, but now she was in a hurry to go! The yellow haired woman overtook her at the hall, and she patted June on the shoulder.

"You're all right, Peachie," she approved, "but remember this, the fixer gets the blisters."

June was putting on her hat and coat when Mrs. Perry wonderfully found herself in the rear door to say, miss? And he was quite respectful to Marie. "I don't know her, Mr. Officer," smiled Marie.

"You, Marie," screamed Aunt Debby, "you say you don't know me?"

"Go on about your business," ordered the big policeman.

"I don't leave this spot without that girl!" declared Aunt Debby, planting her fists on her hips and spreading her feet apart. Then the outraged majesty of the law asserted itself.

the dark, black vandyked face of Gilbert Blythe.

"This way!" called the yellow haired woman and with a jerk of a tasseled curtain cord drew aside the great yellow hangings of the salon windows, which ran to the floor.

The terrified women threw open the windows in an instant and were out on the latticed balcony, down the steps and through the yard to the walled park fronting on the other side.

As June sped away she heard the roar of the fire engines and the hoarse shouts of the fire crowd in front of 48 Kingsley court.

Blythe had dashed after her, but he reached the street only in time to see her boarding a downtown car. He caught the next one.

All unconscious that she was pursued and grown careless by her three days of safety in the Widow O'Keefe's thoroughly protected house, June sighted at her usual corner and hurried down the cross street. At a dozen dingy streets and alleys plunged to the gutter, apparently dazed by the impact, wandered angularly and aimlessly off, June met on a narrow crossing a being fairly giggling with alcohol. Her heart popped into her throat, and she was about to turn back, for she would have died rather than to have brushed clothes with the object, when the creature, catching sight of her, immediately stepped far over into the mud, jerked off his battered cap and with it made a courtesy so sweeping that he was unable to rise up for five minutes afterward.

That was enough for one day, and June ran down the street, past the little fountain, into the sanctuary of the Widow O'Keefe's house, up the two flights of stairs and dropped into the wicker chair.

"Slippers," was all she said.

Marie was on her knees in an instant, showing every gum.

"Aunt Debby," she cried, and from then on she kept after the wonderful chicken people had been consumed the conversation flowed with never an ebb.

It was good to have found a refuge like this. It seemed far, far away from the New York which these two knew, and it was as if no one could ever find them here. They were safe. Safe!

Is she ever safe? As Ned Warner stood trying vainly to extract information from Officer Dowd June's car flashed by him and he caught a glimpse of her.

Officer Dowd was astonished to have his particularly insistent questioner stop abruptly in the middle of a sentence and go dashing madly after a street car. In half a block the young man gave up that absurd chase.

The traffic thickened just ahead, so that for three or four blocks Ned was able to keep sight of the car as it stopped and started. Finally it was blocked, and Ned was able to catch up with it. June was no longer among the passengers!

There was a girl on your car wearing a fur cap with a green tassel! breathlessly said Ned to the conductor. "Bet your life."

"Where did she leave your car?"

"On the track."

Ned dropped off the car, left to his own logic. He had alighted somewhere within these last two blocks. One going farther west would in all probability have taken a more convenient car line. To the east lay a tenement district of old, small houses. On the other hand, Ned struck east.

"Have you seen a girl wearing a fur cap with a green tassel?"

The young man with the yellow dress over one ear shifted his cigarette. "I'll be the Patsy. What's the answer?"

He asked that question of countless people. On a corner where half a dozen streets and alleys had staggered themselves by running into each other Ned found a human being swaying gently in the breeze.

"Have you seen?"

Ned stopped after one glance into that vacuous face and one whirl from that far from vacuous breath.

"Pipe up, pal," husked the jiggled one. Ned went over his formula.

"Have you seen a girl wearing a fur cap with a green tassel?"

"Well, what do you think of that?" And it stopped swaying for a moment.

A gray with black whiskers, and the human being illustrated the Vandyke by a motion of his hand, "asked me the same thing!"

Blythe again! Ned clinched his fist. "Did you see the girl?"

The object winked.

"S' none of your business!" he answered with great dignity and reeled away.

Ned gazed after him in perplexity. There was no use to question that fellow any further, but it was certain that the man had seen June. She had passed this way then. She was somewhere near. With unshakable swift- ness she passed this way! Ned chose the most direct street, the one which led to a little fountain, where another street angled sharply into it. And this fountain was visible from the third floor windows of the Widow O'Keefe's house. Ned Warner's heart was full of murder.

Blythe had passed that way, but he had gone up another street. Now he, too, in his wandering search for the missing bride came down toward the little fountain from the other angle.

June looked out of the window. In the gathering dusk she saw without recognizing them the two men approaching each other, with the sharp cornered building between.

At the point and under the light they would meet, Gilbert Blythe and Ned Warner. And the husband of June had murdered in his heart!

EXPLOITS OF ELAINE

SYNOPSIS.

The New York police are mystified by a series of murders of prominent men. The principal clue to the murderer is the warning letter which is sent the victims, signed with a "Clutching Hand." The latest victim of the mysterious assassin is Taylor Dodge, the insurance man. Kennedy, the daughter, Elaine, employs Craig Kennedy, the famous scientific detective, to try to unravel the mystery. What Kennedy accomplishes is told by his friend, Jameson, a newspaper man.

THIRD EPISODE

The Vanishing Jewels.
Banging away at my typewriter the next day, in Kennedy's laboratory, I was startled by the sudden, insistent ringing of the telephone near me.

"Hello," I answered, for Craig was at work at his table, trying still to extract some clue from the slender evidence thus far elicited in the Dodge mystery.

"Oh, Mr. Kennedy," I heard an excited voice over the wire reply, "my friend, Susie Martin, is here. Her father has just received a message from that Clutching Hand and—"

"Just a moment, Miss Dodge," I interrupted. "This is Mr. Jameson."

"Oh!" came back the voice, breathless and disappointed. "Let me have Mr. Kennedy—quick!"

I had already passed the telephone to Craig and was watching him keenly as he listened over it.

He motioned to me for a pad and pencil that lay near me.

"Please read the letter again, slower, Miss Dodge," he asked, adding, "There isn't time for me to see it—just yet. But I want it exactly. You say it is made up of separate words and type cut from newspapers and pasted on note paper?"

I handed him paper and pencil.

"All right, now, Miss Dodge, go ahead."

As he wrote he indicated to me by his eyes that he wanted me to read. I did so:

Sturtevant Martin, Jeweler,
No. 735, Fifth Avenue, New York City.
Sir—As you have failed to deliver the $10,000. I shall send your main diamond case at exactly noon today.

"Thank you, Miss Dodge," continued Kennedy, laying down the pencil.

"Yes, I understand perfectly—signed by that same Clutching Hand. Let me see," he pondered, looking at his watch. "It is now half-past eleven. Very well. I shall meet you and Miss Martin at Mr. Martin's store directly."

It lacked five minutes of noon when Kennedy and I dashed up before Martin's and dismissed our taxicab.

A Remarkable Scene Greeted Us.

Sturtevant Martin was a typical society business man, quietly but richly dressed.

In the excitement I glanced about hurriedly.

Directly in front of me was a sign tacked up on a pillar, which read: "This store will be closed at noon to-day. Martin & Co."

As the customers were gone.

Martin himself was evidently very nervous and very much alarmed. Indeed, no one could blame him for that. Merely to have been singled out by this amazing master criminal was enough to cause panic. Already he had engaged detectives, prepared for whatever might happen, and they had advised him to leave the diamonds in the counter, clear the store and let the crooks try anything, if they dared.

Just back of us, and around the corner as we came in, we had noticed a limousine which had driven up. Three faultlessly attired dandies had entered a doorway down the street, and we learned afterward, apparently going to a fashionable tailor's which occupied the second floor of the old-fashioned building, the first floor having been renovated and made ready for renting.

Had we been there a moment sooner we might have seen, I suppose, that one of them nodded to a taxicab driver, who was standing at a public hack stand a few feet up the block. The driver nodded unobtrusively back at the man.

In spite of the excitement, Kennedy quietly examined the showcase, which was, indeed, a veritable treasure store of brilliants.

Slowly the hands of the clock came nearer together at noon.

We all gathered about the showcase, with its glittering hoard of wealth, forming a circle at a respectable distance.

In deep-toned tones the clock played the chords written, I believe, by Handel. Then it began striking.

Nothing had happened.

We all breathed a sigh of relief.

"Well, it is still there!" exclaimed Martin, pointing at the showcase with a forced laugh.

Suddenly came a rending and crashing sound. It seemed as if the very floor on which we stood was giving way.

The showcase, with all its priceless contents, went smashing into the cellar below.

The flooring beneath the case had been cut through!

All crowded forward, gazing at the black, yawning cavern.

Down below, three men, covered with smocks and their faces hidden by masks, had knocked the props away from the ceiling of the cellar, which they had saved almost through at their leisure, and the showcase had landed eight or ten feet below, shivered into a thousand bits.

A volley of shots whizzed past us, and another. While one crook was hastily stuffing the untold wealth of jewels into a burlap bag the others had drawn revolvers and were firing up through the hole in the floor despatchly.

"Look out!" cried someone behind us before we could recover from our first surprise and return the fire.

One of the desperadoes had taken a bomb from under his smock, lighted it and thrown it up through the hole in the floor.

It sailed up over our heads and landed near our little group, on the floor, the fuse sputtering ominously.

I heard an exclamation of fear from Elaine.

the fuse to burn down closer to the explosion point.

It was now within less than an inch of sure doom.

Suddenly he raised it and hurled the deadly thing down through the hole.

We could hear the imprecations of the crooks as it struck the cellar floor, near them.

"Leave the store—quick!" rang out Kennedy's voice.

Down below the crooks were beating a hasty retreat through a secret entrance which they had effected.

"The bomb—run!" cried another voice gruffly.

The explosion that followed lifted us fairly off our feet.

As the smoke from the explosion cleared away, Kennedy could be seen, the first to run forward.

Meanwhile Martin's detectives had rushed down a flight of back stairs that led into the coal cellar. With coal shovels and bars, anything they could lay hands on, they attacked the door that opened forward from the coal cellar into the front basement where the robbers had been.

A moment Kennedy and Bennett paused on the brink of the abyss which the bomb had made, waiting for the smoke to decrease. Then they began to climb down cautiously over the piled-up wreckage.

The explosion had set the basement afire, but the fire had not gained much headway by the time they reached the basement. Quickly Kennedy ran to the door into the coal cellar and opened it.

From the other side Martin, followed by the police and the detectives, burst in.

"Fire!" cried one of the policemen, leaping back to turn in an alarm from the special apparatus upstairs.

All except Martin began beating out the flames, using such weapons as they already held in their hands to batter down the door.

To Martin there was one thing paramount—the jewels.

In the midst of the confusion, Elaine, closely followed by her friend, Susie, made her way fearlessly into the stifling smoke down the stairs.

"There are your jewels, Mr. Martin," cried Kennedy, kicking the precious burlap bag with his foot as if it had been so much ordinary merchandise, and turning toward what was in his mind the most important thing at stake—the direction taken by the agents of the Clutching Hand.

"Thank heaven!" ejaculated Martin, fairly pouncing on the bag and tearing it open. "They didn't get away with them—after all!" he exclaimed, examining the contents with satisfaction.

Events were moving rapidly.

The limousine had been standing innocently enough at the curb near the corner, with the taxicab close behind it.

Less than ten minutes after they had entered three well-dressed men came out of the vacant shop, apparently from the tailor's above, and climbed leisurely into their car.

As the last one entered, he half turned to the taxicab driver, hiding from the latter the fact that he was looking at the Clutching Hand, which the taxicab driver returned in the same manner. Then the big car whirled up the avenue.

All this we learned later from a street sweeper who was at work near by.

Down below, while the police and detectives were putting out the fire, Kennedy was examining the wall of the cellar, looking for the spot where the crooks had escaped.

"A secret door!" he exclaimed, as he paused after tapping along the wall to determine its character. "You can see how the force of the explosion has loosened it."

Sure enough, when he pointed it out to us, it was plainly visible. One of the detectives picked up a crowbar and others, still with the hastily selected implements they had seized to fight the fire, started in to pry it open.

As it yielded Kennedy rushed his way through; Elaine, always utterly fearless, followed. Then the rest of us went through.

There seemed to be nothing, however, that would help us in the cellar next door, and Kennedy mounted the steps of a stairway in the rear.

The stairway led to a sort of store-room, full of barrels and boxes, but otherwise characterless. When I arrived Kennedy was gingerly holding up the smocks which the crooks had worn.

"We're on the right trail," commented Elaine as he showed them to her, but where do you suppose the owners are?"

Craig shrugged his shoulders and gave a quick look about. "Evidently they came in from and went away by the street," he observed, hurrying to the door, followed by Elaine.

On the sidewalk he gazed up the street cleaner, called to him.

descried the car treading its way in and out among the others, just about disappearing.

A moment later Craig caught sight of the vacant taxicab and crooked his finger at the driver, who answered promptly by cranking his engine.

"You saw that limousine standing here?" asked Craig.

"Yes," nodded the chauffeur, with a show of alertness.

"Well, follow it," ordered Kennedy, jumping into the cab.

"Yes, sir."

Craig was just about to close the door when a slight figure flashed past us and a dainty foot was placed on the step.

"Please, Mr. Kennedy," pleaded Elaine, "let me go. They may lead to my father's slayer."

She said it so earnestly that Craig could scarcely have resisted if he had wanted to do so.

Just as Elaine and Kennedy were moving off I came out of the vacant store, with Bennett and the detectives.

"Craig!" I cried. "Where are you going?"

Kennedy stuck his head out of the window, and I am quite sure that he was not altogether displeased that I was not with him.

"Chasing that limousine," he shouted back. "Follow us in another car."

A moment later he and Elaine were gone.

Bennett and I looked about.

"There are a couple of cabs—down there," I pointed out at the other end of the block. "I'll take one, you take the other."

Who, besides Bennett, went in the other cab I don't know, but it made no difference, for we soon lost them. Our driver, however, was a really clever fellow. Far ahead now we could see the limousine drive around a corner, making a sharp right-hand turn.

My cab followed, skidding dangerously near a pole.

But the taxicab was no match for the powerful limousine. On uptown they went, the only thing preventing the limousine from escaping being the fear of pursuit by traffic police if the driver let out speed. They were content to manage to keep just far enough ahead to be out of danger of having Kennedy overhaul them. As for us, we followed as best we could, on uptown, past the city line, and out into the country.

There, Kennedy lost sight altogether of the car he was trailing. Worse than that, we lost sight of Kennedy. Still we kept on blindly, trusting to luck and common sense in picking the road.

I was peering ahead over the driver's shoulder, the window down, trying to direct him, when we approached a fork in the road. Here was a dilemma which must be decided at once, rightly or wrongly.

As we neared the crossroad I gave an involuntary exclamation. Beside the road, almost on it, lay the figure of a man. Our driver pulled up with a jerk and I was out of the car in an instant.

There lay Kennedy! Someone had blackjacked him. He was groaning and just beginning to show signs of consciousness as I bent over.

"What's the matter, old man?" I asked, helping him to his feet.

He looked about dazed a moment, then seeing me and comprehending, he pointed excitedly, but vaguely.

"Elaine!" he cried. "They're kidnapping Elaine!"

What had really happened, as we learned later from Elaine and others, was that when the crossroads was reached the three crooks in the limousine had stopped long enough to speak to an accomplice stationed there, according to their plan for a getaway.

He was a tough-looking individual who might have been hobnobbing to the city. When, a few minutes later, Kennedy and Elaine had approached the fork, their driver had slowed up, as if in doubt which way to go. Craig had stuck his head out of the window, as I had done, and, seeing the crossroads, had told the chauffeur to stop. There stood the hobo.

"Did a car pass here, just now—a big car?" called Craig.

The man put his hand to his ear, as if only half comprehending.

"Which way did the big car go?" repeated Kennedy.

The hobo approached the taxicab suddenly, as if he had a grudge against cars in general.

One question after another elicited little that could be construed as intelligence. If Craig had only been able to see, he would have found out that, with his back toward the window, as I had done, and, seeing the crossroads, had told the chauffeur to stop. There stood the hobo.

The driver shrugged his shoulders. "Must be something wrong with the ignition, I guess," he replied.

Kennedy looked the car over hastily. "I can't see anything wrong," he frowned.

"Well, there is," growled the driver. Precious minutes were speeding away as they argued. Finally with his characteristic energy, Kennedy put the taxicab driver aside.

"Let me try it," he said. "Miss Dodge, will you arrange that spark and throttle?"

Elaine, equal to anything, did so, and Craig bent down and cranked the engine. It started on the first spin.

"See," he exclaimed. "There wasn't anything, after all."

He took a step toward the taxicab.

"Mr. Kennedy—look out!" cried Elaine.

Craig turned. But it was too late. The rough-looking fellow had awakened to life. Suddenly he stepped up behind Kennedy with a blackjack. As the heavy weight descended Craig crumpled up on the ground unconscious.

With a scream, Elaine turned and started to run. But the chauffeur seized her arm.

"Say, bo," he asked of the rough fellow, "what does Clutching Hand want with her? Quick! There's another cab likely to be along in a moment with that fellow Jameson in it."

The rough fellow, with an oath, seized her and dragged her into the taxicab. "Go ahead!" he growled, indicating the road.

Who, besides Elaine, sped, leaving Kennedy unconscious on the side of the road, where we found him.

"What are we to do?" I asked helplessly of Kennedy, when we had at last got home.

His head still ringing from the force of the blow of the blackjack, Craig stooped down, then knelt in the dust of the road, then ran ahead a bit, where it was somewhat muddy.

"Which way—this way?" he muttered to himself.

I thought perhaps the blow had affected him and leaned over to see what he was doing. Instead, he was studying the marks made by the tire of the Clutching Hand cab.

More slowly now and carefully, we proceeded, for a mistake meant losing the trail of Elaine.

We came to another crossroads and the driver glanced at Craig. "Stop!" he ordered.

In another instant he was down in the dirt, examining the road for marks.

"That way!" he indicated, leaping back to the running board.

We piled back into the car and proceeded in the direction of the taxicab, as fast as he would permit. So it continued, perhaps for a couple of hours.

At last Kennedy stopped the cab and slowly directed the driver to wear into an open space that looked particularly lonesome. Near it stood a one-story brick factory building, closed, but not abandoned.

As I looked about at the unattractive scene, Kennedy already was down on his knees in the dirt again, studying the tire tracks. They were all confused, showing that the taxicab we were following had evidently backed in and turned several times before going on.

"Crossed by another set of tire tracks," he exclaimed excitedly, studying closer. "That must have been the limousine, waiting."

Laboriously he was following the course of the cars in the open space, when one word escaped him. "Footprints!"

He was up and off in a moment, before we could imagine what he was after. We had got out of the cab, and followed him as, down to the very shore of a sort of cove or bay, he went.

There lay a rusty, discarded boiler on the beach, half submerged in the rising tide. At this tank the footprints seemed to go right down the sand and into the waves, which were slowly obliterating them. Kennedy gazed on as if to make out a possible boat on the horizon where the cove widened out.

"Look!" I cried.

Further down the shore, a few feet, I had discovered the same prints, going in the opposite direction, back toward the place from which he had just come. I started to follow them, but soon found myself alone. Kennedy had paused beside the old boiler.

"What is it?" I asked, retracing my steps.

He did not answer, but seemed to be listening. We listened also. There certainly was a most peculiar noise inside that tank.

Was it a muffled scream? Kennedy reached down and picked up a rock, hitting the tank with a resounding blow. As the echo died down, he listened again.

Yes, there was a sound—a scream, perhaps—a woman's voice, faint, but unmistakable.

for getting rid of Kennedy might possibly have miscarried. But the taxicab driver and the rough-faced fellow had reassured them with the sign of the Clutching Hand, and the revolvers were lowered.

As they parleyed hastily, the roughneck and the fake chauffeur lifted Elaine out of the taxi. She was bound and gagged.

"Well, now we've got her, what shall we do with her?" asked one.

"It's got to be quick. There's another cab," put in the driver.

"The deuce with that!"

"The deuce with nothing," he returned. "That fellow Kennedy's a clever one. He may come to. If he does, he won't miss us. Quick, now!"

"See," cried the third. "See that old boiler down there at the edge of the water? Why not put her in there? No one'll ever think to look in such a place!"

With a hasty expression of approval, the roughneck picked Elaine up bodily, still struggling vainly, and together they carried her, bound and gagged, to the tank. The opening, which was toward the water, was small, but they managed, roughly, to thrust her in.

A moment later and they had rolled up a huge boiler against the small entrance, bracing it so that it would be impossible for her to get out from the inside. Then they drove off hastily.

What was that? Silence? Or was someone outside?

Coolly, in spite of the emergency, Kennedy took in the perilous situation.

The lower end of the boiler, which was on a slant on the rapidly shelving beach, was now completely under water and impossible to get at. Besides, the opening was small, too small.

Kennedy gazed about frantically and his eye caught the sign on the factory:

OXYACETYLENE WELDING CO.

"Come, Walter," he cried, running up the shore.

A moment later, breathless, he reached the doorway. It was, of course, locked. Kennedy whipped out his revolver and several well-directed shots through the keyhole smashed the lock. We put our shoulders to it and swung the door open, entering the factory.

Beside a work bench stood two long cylinders, studded with bolts.

"That's what I'm looking for," exclaimed Craig. "Here, Walter, take one. I'll take the other—and the tubes—and—"

We ran, for there was no time to lose. As nearly as I could estimate it, the water must now be slowly closing.

over Elaine.

"What is it?" I asked, as he joined up the tubes from the tanks to the peculiar hooklike apparatus he carried.

"An oxyacetylene blowpipe," he muttered back feverishly. "Used for welding and cutting, too," he added.

With a light he touched the nozzle, instantly a hissing, blinding flame made the steel under it incandescent. The terrific heat from one nozzle made the steel glow. The stream of oxygen from the second completely consumed the hot metal.

"Kennedy was actually cutting out a huge hole in the still exposed surface of the tank—all around, except for a few inches, to prevent the heavy piece from falling inward."

CATARRH OF HEAD AND STOMACH

Took Peruna
Five Bottles
Cured Me

Mr. Frank Richter, No. 309 East Second St., Winona, Minn., writes: "My catarrh was principally located in my head and stomach. I tried many remedies without success. I tried several doctors, but they were unable to cure me. I read of Peruna in the papers, and five bottles cured me."

"As a remedy for catarrh I take pleasure in recommending Peruna for catarrh of the stomach. I know what it is to be afflicted with this awful disease and consider it my duty to say a word in behalf of the remedy which gave me such relief. Peruna cured me, and I know it will cure any one else who suffers from this disease. It gives me great pleasure to testify to the curative effects of this medicine. Peruna is a well tested and frequently used remedy, and for catarrh of the stomach it is unsurpassed."

As a rule, people when ailing apply very properly to a doctor before resorting to a ready-to-take medicine. The great majority are cured by the doctor. But a per cent. of chronic cases fail to find a cure and at last begin to use ready-to-take medicines. It is very noticeable indeed the number of people among our testifiers who say that it was only after the doctor had failed to cure them that they were induced to take Peruna. Then they find to their relief, to their surprise, to their joy, that Peruna is the remedy they should have taken at first.

Full Report of Grand Jury.

To Hon. J. M. Benton,
Judge Madison County Court.

Dear Sir: We, the jury empaneled to investigate the affairs of Madison county, beg leave to report that we have inquired diligently into all cases reported to us and find that the majority of lawlessness in this county is traceable to the use of intoxicants and the unlawful practice of pistol toting.

We believe that there is more or less whisky and beer sold in nearly every neighborhood in this county, but in the city of Richmond, under the shadow of her churches and court-house, we find the most flagrant violations of the local option law. We have had many witnesses before us, and exhausted our talent of interrogation, but the intoxicants or some other cause seem to have dimmed their eyesight and affected their memory until they fail to recognize faces or to remember names or dates. We believe that in many cases purchasers of bootleg whisky could, if they would, give the information sought. The books of the Adams Express Co. and L. & N. Railroad Co. show an astonishing amount of whisky shipped into our county, and we believe in many instances fictitious names are used to deceive the public and thereby conceal the identity of the owner. We believe that the only way to lessen these shipments and to bring the guilty ones to justice is to stimulate a more concerted action among friends of temperance and to elect officers in sympathy with local option.

The next in importance to the illicit sale of whisky comes the pistol toting, with its attributes—homicide, shooting on the highway, disturbing the peace, terrorizing women, disturbing public worship, etc. We believe that these causes can be greatly reduced if the good people in every community would assist in furnishing evidence and our juries and officers would inflict the penalties now on our statute books without fear or favor.

In nearly every case of homicide that has come to us we believe that the killing might have been averted but for the ever-ready, deadly pistol.

A committee of three was appointed to examine the license book for horse and jack licenses and they reported no irregularities.

We visited the county jail and found it in bad condition. The plumbing is out of fix and unsanitary. More closets are needed and bedding should be changed occasionally, and a more liberal use of soap, water and disinfectants would add to the comfort of inmates and to the good name of Old Madison county.

There was some complaint among the prisoners about their fare, but we believe that they are now well fed and well treated.

Mr. Taylor tells us that the discipline for the most part is good. He explains the trouble he has in keeping the jail free of vermin so long as fresh recruits come in so frequently from "Rat Row." There are in jail at present 21 whites and 12 colored—29 males and two females, which taxes the capacity of our jail, and this grand jury has emphasized the importance of rigid sanitary efforts on the part of Mr. Taylor while it is in such a crowded condition. Our public highways in the county are in a deplorable condition, caused by the unusually bad weather and the heavy hauling over them while they are soft, and we urge the fiscal court to spend every available dollar on them during the coming season, that Madison county may be abreast of her sister counties in the matter of good roads.

The citizens of Richmond called our attention to the poor condition of some of the streets and sidewalks in the city of Richmond, namely East Main street, leading to the L. & N. R. R. depot, and Third street, leading to the tobacco warehouses. We had a majority of the City Council before us and they assured us that work would begin on these thoroughfares as soon as the weather would permit, and that they would be put in thorough condition.

A committee was sent to examine the county poor-house, near Union, and they reported the institution a disgrace to a civilized community. It is unsanitary in the superlative degree, with grates and hearths broken and out of repair; wall paper loose and hanging, which furnishes abundant hiding places for the bedbugs, which infest the place in numbers like the stars in the heavens or the sands of the sea. There are perhaps eighteen or twenty people domiciled there and are as contented as the foregoing conditions will admit. These people are unfortunates and not criminals and their condition should be made better. Mrs. Soper is perhaps doing her best, but the task is too much for any one woman to undertake. And we recommend that the fiscal court take this matter in hand and put the institution in a sanitary condition.

We further suggest to our citizens who are charitably inclined and who spend much time and worry over the Belgian situation in the East, that they will find a fruitful field near Union for the exercise of the greatest of christian virtues.

We naturally leave some unfinished business; some witnesses we have been unable to get before us. We suggest, therefore, that our foreman, or some member of this grand jury, be recognized to appear before the next one that these matters may be taken up and properly disposed of and that attachments be issued for witnesses who have been summoned and failed to appear.

Respectfully submitted,
T. J. COOPER, Foreman.
J. W. HENDON, Clerk.

CHANCE TO MAKE KENTUCKY
GREATEST HOG RAISING STATE

10,000 Hogs Fattened From Slops and Distillers' Dried Grains In Daviess County Alone Last Year

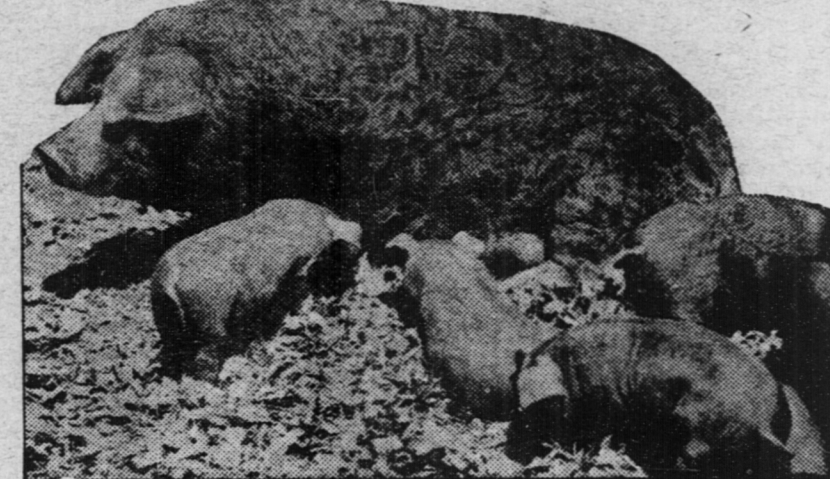

(By Stephen Bolles, in Bourbon Stock Journal).

Kentucky can easily be made the greatest hog-raising State in the Union. That has been demonstrated by Daviess county farmers. Last year about 10,000 hogs were fattened in that county on distillers' slops and dried grains.

So successful were the experiments that the distillers' slops and dried grains were used by farmers to utilize this by-product of the distilleries for feeding Officially Tested Out. The official tests of this feed have been very satisfactory in every way. It has the stamp of approval of the best chemists in the agricultural world. Men from experiment stations who know all about food values of different grains and foods have given it the highest recommendation.

The richest agricultural States in the Union are those which lead in hog production. Iowa, with its vast field of corn; Illinois, Missouri and Indiana in the order named, have thousands hogs. Special tank cars were also provided for the transportation of both the slops and dried grains.

Makes Prize Winners. At a great barbecue on the Owensboro Fair Grounds last May, attended by 20,000 farmers and feeders, there were on exhibition scores of fine hogs fattened on distillers' dried grains and slops, and many cash prizes were awarded.

Officials from the agricultural department of the State and Federal Government were present and made addresses on the proper care and feeding of hogs and the prevention of cholera. Specimens of distillers' dried grains and slops from various distilleries were also on exhibition and their respective food value were explained by experts.

Fattens Quickly. One of the greatest advantages in feeding distillers' dried grain is the fact that nothing is lost. The distillers remove only the non-fattening portions of the grain, leaving an average of 40 per cent of protein, which is the element required to fatten stock. It has been supposed by many people that the best way to fatten a hog is to feed hard corn. But corn in the natural state yields about 13 per cent of protein, as much of it passes through the animal undigested.

Distillers' dried grains therefore possess about three times the fattening properties of natural corn. By feeding these dried grains with alfalfa, clover or other green stuffs, hogs fatten quicker and better than by the use of corn alone and at very much less cost.

Matters of Importance.

"Five big issues will confront the next administration and General Assembly for settlement, and, perhaps, cut a large score in the approaching State campaign," said Gov. McCreary. "They are revenue and taxation, public roads, insurance regulation, revision of the educational laws and probably constitutional amendments relative to woman suffrage."

Referring to them categorically, the Governor said:

"First—Revenue and taxation. This is bound to be a question of great importance.

"Second—Public roads. The fact that the State incurs the State tax 5 cents on the $100 for the benefit of public roads at the last session of the General Assembly provides quite a large sum of money to be spent in their improvement; and the good roads bill, which is said Congress will pass, giving to each State an appropriation for the benefit of road improvement, gives the road question great importance.

"Third—Insurance. It will be remembered that the insurance law passed by the last General Assembly was opposed by the insurance companies so strongly that many of them withdrew from the State and refused to do business in Kentucky for a time. A compromise was effected whereby a commission was appointed to prepare a bill for submission to the next General Assembly.

"Fourth—Revision of the educational laws. There is a decided demand for such revision.

"Fifth—The outlook indicates that there will be great efforts made to enact laws in regard to State-wide prohibition and woman suffrage."

Colds Are Often Most Serious—Stop Possible Complications.

The disregard of a cold has often brought many a regret. The fact of sneezing, coughing, or a fever should be warning enough that your system needs immediate attention. CANDIDATE FOR SECRETARY OF STATE

G. B. LIKENS

THE VOTERS OF KENTUCKY—I am a candidate for Secretary of State, subject to the will of the Democratic party to be expressed in the primary election Aug. 7, 1915. My party loyalty, my availability as a candidate, my conduct as a private citizen and my record as a public official are respectfully submitted for investigation and consideration. For more than three years I have served you as Assistant Auditor, and while the office is not an elective one, the duties are important and exacting. These I have honestly endeavored to discharge properly and efficiently. My experience, I feel, has especially equipped me to fill the office to which I now aspire. If nominated and elected as your Secretary of State, all the energy and ability which I have shall be earnestly devoted to the business of that department. No duty will be too arduous for me to perform faithfully, and none will be considered too trivial to receive careful and prompt attention. Feeling very grateful for the assurances of support already received, and soliciting the votes and influence of all, I am,

Sincerely yours,
G. B. LIKENS.

Feel Blue—Or Just Stupid?

Sluggish bowels and torpid liver usually go together and it does not take long for constipation to produce a bad condition—a feeling of languor or listlessness—the "blues," headache, palpitation or other matter. Indeed, when in this condition the system invites more serious illness and is not able to throw off diseases. Foley Cathartic Tablets are a wholesome laxative and cleansing cathartic. They act without inconvenience, griping or sickening. For sale by all dealers everywhere.—Adv. Feb.

FIFTY THOUSAND LOAVES OF BREAD FOR POOR.

Cooper Awards Contract For Immense Quantity In Louisville.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., February 24.—Fifty thousand loaves of bread will be given away by L. T. Cooper, the "Tanlac Man," to the poor people of Louisville.

The "bread line," as this unique charitable act is termed, was inaugurated in Louisville, Sunday morning, and between the hours of 10 and 12 o'clock, several thousand loaves of bread were distributed to the worthy on the big vacant lot on Walnut street, next to The Daily Herald, in ample time for the Sabbath dinner.

Mr. Cooper awarded an order for the 50,000 loaves of bread to the American Baking Company. The bread is of the very best quality.

When seen at the Seelbach, where the noted visitor is stopping, Mr. Cooper said:

"I have anticipated the beginning of this work among the poor with keen interest. I have wanted to perform some small service of this kind in the metropolitan city of my native state, Kentucky, for several years.

"Therefore, the initial order for the bread, consisting of fifty thousand loaves, has been given to the American Baking Company, and the work has begun.

"We gave away several thousand loaves Sunday and each time we will meet the demands."

The sale of Tanlac, the famous medicine being introduced in Louisville by the personal direction of Mr. Cooper, is now very great and steadily increasing. The results in cases of catarrhal affections of stomach, liver and kidney derangements are really remarkable, and many of Louisville's best citizens are testifying to the medicine's marvelous merits.

Tanlac can now be bought in Richmond at H. L. Perry's Drug Store, the exclusive agent for this place.—Adv.

THE NORMAL.

BY MAUDE GIBSON.

Rev. Yohan, a native of Kurdistan, Persia, and a Presbyterian minister, who is now in America raising money for the furtherance of the missionary cause in his own land, spoke on Saturday morning at the chapel. The gentleman's native costume, besides the various shoes, sashes, handkerchiefs and other articles of wearing apparel shown, was of the greatest interest to our young people. His message from a people almost unknown to us was also a source of pleasure and instruction.

Mrs. Wren Jones Grintead has gone to Owensville, to visit her sister, Mrs. Chas. S. Brothers, who was formerly Miss Anna Hawkins, and a student at the Normal.

Miss Bettie Jordan, of Roanoke, Va., is the charming guest of Miss Lella McKee at Sullivan Hall.

Dean Roark has been spending several days in Lexington this week.

Prof. Keith has been having a severe attack of la grippe, but is now recuperating.

The Normal School Basketball team played two exciting games recently, the first Friday night with St. Mary's, which we lost, and the other with the Lindsey-Wilson Training School, of Columbia, which we won. The team is now off on the annual trip to Bowling Green, where they will play two games with Western State Normal boys.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; since cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces. We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

Dear Amy—The other day I told John he just had to let me fix up the parlor. I got tired of seeing the old things in it any longer. I hope your husband is not so thoughtless of home as mine has been. But now he is too glad that we have fixed up our parlor. He enjoys home lots more, and he don't want to stay down town "nights" anymore. John wants you and Bob to come and see us.

Always your friend, Lou.
